Upwards of seventy South Sea Islanders have availed themselves of the opportunity of returning to their island bomes. A number from this island are quarantined on board the vessel, these from the other islands at Fisherman's Point. As their contracts come to an end most of these people desire to return. The South Sea immigration experiment has certainly not been a success, in fact we may go further, and write it down as a definite failure.

Ah Tung was his name, not Ah Sin, as in Bret Harte's celebrated ballad, and the young ones thought that they could teach him cards, so they proposed a game of draw poker. Poor Ah Tung was perfectly ignorant of this accomplishment of Western civilization, but to oblige the Western barbarian, he was not averse to tearning. So they sat down, and Ah Tung, who didn't understand the game and had not a chance at dealing, lost some sixty or seventy dollars. At last, as luck would have it, the eards come into the Celestial one's hands. He dealt, and four tens fell to his adversary. "Good hand," thought the youth, and he started in betting. The fun ran up rather high, and when it had reached about two hundred dollars, it seemed about time to stop, because Ah Tung couldn't be worth much more than that. The excitement had rather told on the outer barbarian, but the offspring of the "Floscry Kingdom" had keptremarkably cool; his imperturbable. Chinese face had never changed a muscle. Why should it? By some unaccountable means the astute one had four aces in his hand! This happened in this city, and beats the "Heathen Guines" hollow. Judge Fornander has done splendid vaccinating work at Lahaina, he has gone into the matter cow amore, and has made a regular list of all the people in the district; he talked with them, and by dint of great exertions got them, to come together so that great electrons got them to come together so that they might be thoroughly examined, by a com-petent physician on a certain day. The Judge was successful in his efforts, the people came and some 400 were found still unvaccinated, who of course were immediately vaccinated. The Judge considers the district thoroughly protected now.

A Coroner's inquest was held at Lahaina upon the body of an old woman who was found dead in a cave behind Lahainaluna. The poor old woman had been insane and had wandered into the cave and had died there. There were no marks of any kind upon the body to show that she had met with any violence. A verdict to this effect was given by the jury. People up here are surprised that no effort was made to find out who were the relatives of the old woman; they certainly were to blame for not looking properly after her, or if they were unable to do so, for not having had her sent to the Insane Asylum here, where she would have been properly taken care of.

A Layman's Opinion.

Entron Gazette:-I have read with a good deal of care the discussion which has arisen between the Advertiser and the GAZETTE upon the subject of our "Martyr" Father Larkin. It seems to me evident, 1st-That the Advertiser recognizes that Bishop Majoret has not signed the famous letter. 2nd-That the Advertiser admits that a former certificate has been transformed into a letter.

3rd-That the Bishop, according to the GAZETTE, has said before witnesses that he has not signed the above letter. 4th-That the Bishop, according to the Advertiser, signed the certificate before its transform In conclusion that there has been no letter, as the Gazzerre has said, but that there has been a certificate corrected and amended to the needs of the cause of the "faithful worker!" Was this transformation very moral? could I not draw the attention of the Advertiser to the fact that if a certificate of general character has already once been altered for a specific purpose, it would be altered to-morrow for another, so that by the same means the signature might be made to serve for all projects and all purposes? and this of the same means the signature might be made to serve for all projects and all purposes? and this to serve for all projects and all purposes? and this the more easily because everything would lead one to believe that the body of the certificate is written in another hand from that of the Bishop, and it would always be easy for the author to in-troduce any amendments in accordance with his Margret has said as has hever signed this letter, and to inviself he said: "No, I have not signed this letter; something of a similar character was presented to me but I replied that I could not sign. If I should go to the witness box I could only say the truth. I have not signed this letter." I am ready to be confronted with the Bishop upon the subject of his words.

As to Bishop Moran (and allow me to say that Catholic Bishops do not follw the footsteps of Mormon dignitaries who render no accounts to their flock) he made when in Honolula, declarations to neveral laymer and these were sant in a letter to Hishop Maigret—though I was not one of those who sighed the letter, I was one of those who heard the Bishop of Dimedin, and for this matter I am ready to appear in court and substantiate my statement.

As to the letter of Hishop Moran to Father Larkin, may it not be the same which the Bishop demanded back, but which the Rev. Father refused to return?

I would recommend, as a piece of advice to Mr. Gibson, that he should call to mind Mr. Moreno, and that he should be careful whom he makes his friends.

NORTH PACTFIC OCEAN, June 11th, 1881. A large, well-dressed and fashionable audience, the elite of the Northern Pacific were assembled last night to witness a grand varied entertainment in the Hurricane Square Rooms. Long before the time announced, a gorgeous array of carriages with prancing horses and gay postillions had set down at the doors a brilliant assemblage that filled this well-known hall to repletion. Seldom has it been our lot to look round on such a galaxy of beauty and fashion, but where all was rank, worth and loveliness it would seem invidious to point out any amongst the throng in pre-

The King of the Sandwich Islands being unfortunately detained at home by strictly business matters, royalty was not represented.

The chair was taken at 8 r.m. precisely by Major till Friday. General H. B. Keele, K.G., M.H.B., who filled that position in a manner well-known to his large cir-cle of admirers. After a few brief humorous remarks from the chairman, Mr. Sims Reeves, who was in capital voice, gave with great power and expression, "The midshipmite." This, after rapturous applause was followed by a reading "Aux Italiens," given in good taste and style by the Lady de Carteret.

The great Wizard of the South, Coo-e-y Australi-ah was then introduced and proceeded, with the aid of his assistant, Kahero, to unfold the mysteries of natural science. He opened with the wonderful Black Ball trick, and amongst other wonders produced nicely browned rolls from flower, water and sugar by the aid of a fire lit in a bell-topper lent for the occasion by one of the audience. A little diversion was then introduced in the shape of "Nursery Rhymes," sung by Benjamin-Wiggles, the audience evidently enjoying at and joining with spirit in the chorus. After which the great Wizard propounded more marvels, taking watches from locked caskets, and sending them into other boxes right before the audience, also bringing the whole of his clean shirts, drinking cups and other lugsage out of a gentleman's hat. At this stage of the proceedings, Kahero was found talking to the ladies in a distant part of the hall. Mulle, Albani was then led on the stage amid much applause and gave with great sweetness and expression a charming Neapolitan air.

A load and rapturous encore greeted this performance and the lady was reconducted to the stage, when another Italian song was substituted flower, water and sugar by the aid of a fire lit in a

From a very early hour of the morning a stream of people on horseback, on foot, and in vehicles of every description began to set in the direction of Kapiolani Park, and by eight o'clock the stream swelled to a mighty river. There were of course the usual little episodes by the way, and driving down after the great rush we noticed two wrecked buggies by the way side, to which three more were added when the return trip was made. There is a great improvement in the approach to the Park, the road along the beach is now well made and hard so that there is no longer that fearful wade through the sand which used to be so hard upon the horses. Just as we drove up to the entrance we passed two gentlemen in expresses returning to town, both looked limp and were doubled up curiously on their seats-evidently the heat or something else had been too much for them. The crowd on the course was as large, if not larger than usual, and was as a rule good-tempered and happy, though of course now and again there was Kamoa, one of the man who were charged with a difference of opinion followed up by the argumentum od Acminem. The position of the stables, to which we alluded some time back,-we still think a mistake. Carriages are obliged to draw up so far from the judges' stand that it is impossible for the occupants to see the finish of a impossible for the occupants to see the final of a race. Were the stables put the other side of the stand, we think it would be better, certainly horses would run better if in finishing they run to their stables instead of past them.
